

July 4th Fun in the Sun!

Several hundred people gathered on the Kelley House Museum lawn to watch this year's parade. Special thanks to North Coast Brewing Company for donating five different kinds of beer, to Gnar Bar for their amazing BBQ, and to DJ BeetRoots who kept the crowd dancing until we closed the party down. Thanks also to the Chamber of Commerce for inviting us to be in the parade honoring us for 52 years of service to the community! And most of all, we appreciate all the volunteers who help us out at this special fundraiser.

House Museum! The On Tap exhibit traces the deep roots and rich stories behind one of Northern California's most spirited industries—from the small breweries that served the local lumber workers to the craft beer renaissance that put the Mendocino Coast on the national brewing map. A special commemorative book is available for $20 in the museum or online.

A PEEK INTO THE PAST

Mendocino Fourth of July Parade, 1884

by Carol Dominy

enormous American flags up "Liberty Poles" made from tall tree trunks attached to buildings or planted in the ground.

The building on the far right is the Chung Kow Wash House, located on the northwest corner of Kasten and Main Streets. This building was demolished in 1906 and the Bank Building, current home of Out of This World, was built on the site in 1908.

Murder, She Wrote Scripts

We at the Kelley House are just as devastated as you probably are that Murder, She Wrote was removed from the Peacock streaming service! To make up for missing our favorite detective, we've been reading some of the Murder, She Wrote scripts from our archive.

Donated to us by locals who were extras on the show, each script includes a full cast and set list, the episode writers and producers, and when it was written. The script for "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes" was written in March 1984, the episode began filming in April, and it aired in September. A quick turnaround compared to most TV shows now!
